THE LAW OF NEWSPAPERS.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their newspapers, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their newspaper from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled bills and ordered them discontinued.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publishers and the newspapers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers from the office or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
6. The United States Courts have also repeatedly decided that a Postmaster who neglects to perform his duty of giving reasonable notice, as required by the Post Office Department of the neglect of a person to take from the office newspapers addressed to him, renders the Postmaster liable to the publisher for the subscription price.

Josh Billings on the Mule.

The mule is half-hoss and half jack-ass and then comes a full stop; natur discovered hee mistake. Tha weigh more accordin to their neit than enny other kreature, exceptin a crowbar; they can hear any quicker nor futher than the hoss, yet ther ears are big enuff for snow-shoes. You can trust them with enny one whose life aint enny more than the mule's; the only way to keep them in a meader fencing, and let them jump out; tha are ready for use just as soon as tha will do to abuse, tha haint got any friends, and will live on huckle-berry brush, with an occasional chance at Kanada thistles; tha are a modern invenshun; I dont think the Bible deludes to them at all; tha sell for more money than enny other domestic animile. Yu kant tell ther age by look-in into ther mouth enny more than you could a Mexican cannon; tha never hav no disease that a good club won't heal. If tha ever die tha must kum right to life again, for I never heard nobody sa "ded mule." Tha are, like sum men, very korrupt at harte. I've known them to be good mules for six months jus to git a chance to kick somebody. I never owned one, and never meant to unless there is a United States law passed requiring it; the only reason why they are paschut is bekause tha are ashamed of themselves. I hav seen edikated mules in a sirkus, tha kould kick and bite tremenjis. I woud not sa what I am forced to say agin it if his birth want an outrage, and man want to blame for it. Enny man who is willing to drive a mule ought to be exempt by law from running for the Legislature. Tha are the strongest kreature on earth, and heaviest akordin to size. I herd tell ov one who fell off from the tow-path on the Erie kanawl and sunk as soon as he touched bottom, but he kept ripe on tow-ing the bote to the next stashun, breath-in thru his ears, which stuck out ov the water two feet six inches. I didn't see this did, but an auchsuner told me uv it and I never knew an auchsuner tellie, unless it was absolutely convenient.

What Hope Did,

It stole on its plajons to the bed of disease; the sufferer's frown became a smile—the emblem of peace and love.

It went to the house of mourning, and from the lips of sorrow there came sweet and cheerful songs.

It laid its head upon the arm of the poor, which stretched forth at the command of unholly impulses, and saved him from disgrace and ruin.

It well up like a living thing in the bosom of the mother, whose son tarried long after the promised time of his coming and saved her from desolation and the "care that killeth."

It hovered about the head of the youth who had become the Ishmael of society and led him on to works which even his enemies praised.

It snatched the maiden from the jaws of death, and went with the old man to Heaven.

No hope! my good brother. Have it—keep it always with you. Wrestle with it that it may not depart. It may repay your pains. Life is hard enough at best, but hope shall lead you over its mountains and sustain you amie its billows. Part with all beside, but keep thy hope.

A literary announcement from Leipsic run thus:

Our readers will be obliged to us for drawing their attention to some Sanscrit works which will shortly appear. We have not read the books ourselves, but if their contents are as interesting as their titles their perusal must be the acme of delight, the titles are, "Swapantschaksch-anaimahamantrastotra," "Tragumtmika-kalikastotra," "Upangalativratodyapana," "Sankarchat-chaturthivratodyapana" and "Anantatichaturdaryatakutha."

Misery loves company and so does a marriageable young lady.

"Got any boys?" the Marshal said
To a lady from over the Rhine;
And the lady shook her flaxen head,
And civilly answered, "Nine!"

"Got any girls?" the Marshal said
To the lady from over the Rhine;
And again the lady shook her head,

"But some are dead?" the Marshal said

And again the lady shook her head,

"Husband of course?" the Marshal said

And again she shook her flaxen head,
And civilly answered, "Nine!"

"The d— you have?" The Marshal said
To the lady from over the Rhine;
And again she shook her flaxen head,
And civilly answered, "Nine!"

Now what do you mean by shaking your head,
And always answering, "Nine!"
"Ich kann nicht English!" civilly said
The lady from over the Rhine.

*Nine, pronounced nine, is the German for No.

A friend relates the following: "A young lady having purchased an assortment of music at a music store, on returning to her carriage recollected a piece she had neglected to buy. 'Sir,' said she on re-entering the store, 'there is one thing which I had forgotten, and which I must request you to give me.' 'And what is that?' asked the young music seller. 'It is sir, 'One Kind Kiss Before We Part.' She meant the song of that name. The gay youth vaulting instantaneously over the counter, saluted the fair stranger. He lost his heart and his situation, and has doubtless gone for a 'soldier boy' with the Fenians."

DOMESTIC DRAMA.—Scene 1. Mother in the cellar spitting wood. Scene 2.—Daughter in the parlor singing to Clarence Fitz Noodle the pathetic ballad of "Who Will Care for Mother Now?"

"Pray excuse a bit of sarcasm," said Smith to Jones; "but you are an infamous liar and scoundrel!" "Pray pardon a touch of irony," replied Jones, as he knocked him down with a poker.

An Irishman was asked what was his religious belief. "Is't rae belafe ye'd be asking about?" said he. "It's the same as the widdy Brady. I owe her twelve shillings, and she belaves I'll never pay her, and faith, that's my belafe, too."

It seems that we've a woman or two in the city who are capable of handling the reins of government, as will be shown by what follows:

Our reporter was around hunting a house for a friend and called to see a family who were preparing to vacate a cosy dwelling.

As the door stood open, reporter walked in without knocking, and his eyes straightway lighted on the dame of the household, who was making frantic lunges with a broomstick at some object under the bed.

"Good morning, madam. Ah! you have a troublesome cat under the bed?"

"Troublesome cat!—no sir! It's that sneering husband of mine; and I'll have him out, or break every bone in his body!"

"You will, eh?" said a faint voice under the bed. "Now, Susy, you may rave and pound and pound and rave, but I'll be dogged if I'll come out from under this bed while I've got the spirit of a man about me!"—Exchange.

A grim, hard-headed old Judge, after hearing a flowery discourse from a pretentious young barrister, advised him to pluck out the feathers from the wings of his imagination and stick them in the tail of his judgment.

The Mayor of a Western town proposes to kill half the dogs in th place and tan their hides with the bark of the other half.

A Wonderful Man.

There appeared in Paris, in the sixteenth century, one Meccab Ader, calling himself the wandering Jew, and claiming to have lived 1800 years and to have visited all parts of the earth.

He was familiar with every important event and date since the birth of Christ, and was not refused by the most intricate cross-questioning, but answered readily. No one could address him in any language that he was ignorant of. He was visited by all the literati of the city, who believed him to be an impostor, but went away bewildered and astonished. He suddenly disappeared from Paris.

Wishing and Working.

It is idle to wish for certain things; it is wise to work continually for their attainment. Many sit with folded hands, and spend days in wishing; others go manfully to work, and capture the good the others wish for. Bend every energy to the accomplishment of aims, purposes and desires and the result will be a life well filled with the rewards of industry. "A word to the wise is sufficient."—Mrs. Barber's Weekly.

OLD MAIDS.—Say what you will of old maids, their love is generally more strong and sincere than that of the young, milk-and-water creatures whose hearts vibrate between the joys of wedlock and the dissipation of the young lady is capable of setting firmly and exclusively on one object, her love is like a May shower, which makes rainbows, but fills no cisterns.

Here is a case of two persons talking about the same thing. "I would not be a woman, for then I could not love her," says Montague. Lady M. W. Montague says: "the only objection I have to a man is then I should have to marry a woman."—Which is correct, the man's estimate of woman, or the woman's?

"My German friend, how long have you been married?" "Vell, dis is a ding, vot I seldom don't like to talk about, but ven I does, it seems so long as it never was."

"Ah, Mr. Simpkins, we have not chairs enough for our company," said a gay wife to her frugal husband. "Plenty of chair's my, dear; but a little too much company."

"Won't you take half of this poor apple?" said a pretty damsel. "No, I thank you; I would prefer a better half." Eliza blushed and refused him to her papa.

Mother—'Here, Tommy, is some nice castor oil, with orange juice in it.' Doctor—'Now remember, don't give it all to Tommy, leave some for me.' Tommy [who has "been there,"]—"Doctor's a nice man, n'a; give all to the doctor."

G. A. Henry [the Eagle orator], of Tennessee, has been pardoned by the President.

There are to be four or five lady correspondents in Washington this season, attached to the New York papers, who are to the chronicle the gossip of the drawing rooms.

Before 'love comes in at the door,' I would be better to peep through the key-hole. He might see something that would prevent him entering.

There is one advantage in being a block-head—you are never attached with low spirits or apoplexy. The moment a man can worry he ceases to be a fool.

Brigham Young buried his twenty fourth wife on Wednesday and married his forty-fifth on Friday. They say he oscillates between a crape hat-band and white gloves.

Never let people work for you gratis, says an ancient philosopher. Two years ago a man carried a bundle for us, and we have been lending him twenty-five a week ever since.

"Beh, you say that you believe most diseases are contagious. How long have you entertained such notions?" "Ever since I sat alongside of a blue-eyed girl, and caught the palpitation of the heart."

A gentleman, walking with two ladies, stepped on a hogherd hoop that flew up and stuck him in the face. "Good gracious!" said he, "which of you dropped that?"

SYMPTOMS.

The symptoms of catarrh are at first very slight. Persons find they have a cold, that they have frequent attacks, and are more sensitive to the changes of temperature. In this condition the nose may be itchy, or a slight discharge, thin and acrid, afterwards thick and adhesive, may ensue.

As the disease becomes chronic, the discharges are increased in quantity and changed

in quality; they are now thick and heavy and are hawked or coughed out. The secretions are offensive, causing a bad breath; the voice thick and nasal; the eyes are weak, the sense of smell is lessened or destroyed; deafness frequently takes place.

Another common and important symptom of Catarrh is that the person is obliged to clear his throat in the morning of a thick or

slimy mucus, which has fallen from the head

during the night. When this takes place, the person may be sure that his disease is on its way to the lungs, and should use no time in arresting it.

The above are but few of the many Catarrhal symptoms. Write to our Laboratory for our pamphlet describing fully all symptoms, it will be sent FREE to address. Also directions where to procure the medicine.

We are receiving letters from all parts of Union and also numerous testimonials from those using it, bearing the evidence of its infallibility.
